GRADER PURCHASE HELD UP WHEN COUNCILMEN DISAGREE; OTHER BUSINESS TRANSACTED

ANOTHER clash on the subject of street graders marked the Wednesday evening special session of the city council, after a dull beginning of more or less routine business, during which illness required the withdrawal of two of the city family; Mayor James Thoburn, who asked Councilman John Catlin to take the chair as he left, and City Clerk Saidee Van Brower, who struggled bravely to remain at her post during the early part of the meeting, until councilmen and others insisted that she allow herself to be taken home.

Tractor and grader salesmen who have become well-known figures here during the past several months, were present enmasse at the council meeting. During that time Street Commissioner Joseph A. Burge has been trying to convince the council of the need of new street equipment, which they do not seriously question, and to persuade them that he should be the sole judge of the machinery to be bought. City Attorney Argyll Campbell, substituting for Miss Van Brower near the end of the meeting, read a motion which would have authorized the mayor to enter into a contract for the purchase of a motor grader from the J. D. Adams company at a total cost of $4,437.36, handled on a rental basis, the 24 monthly payments of $184.89 to apply on the purchase. Councilman Burge moved that it be passed.

Councilman R. E. Brownell raised the question if it might not be a good idea to refer the matter to a committee of citizens, as has been done with many other important propositions during the past year. Councilman Catlin, in the chair, questioned whether a lay committee would be as competent to judge of the merits of rival equipment as would the street commissioner.

Councilman Rowntree stated that he could not second the motion for three reasons: That as a member of the finance committee (to which the question was referred, and rejected because of the size of the expenditure involved, some months ago) he did not feel at liberty to authorize any one person to spend a sum in excess of $4,000; that no one individual should have sole authority to decide from what company the equipment should be purchased; third, and most important that he was not convinced a motor-driven grader was the proper type of equipment for Carmel streets.

As no second was forthcoming, Councilman Burge, obviously near the explosion point, said, "I motion we lay this matter on the table until the mayor is on the job." He and Catlin had both stated that Mayor Thoburn had assured them he would vote for the purchase from the J. D. Adams Company. Drumming the council table for emphasis, Burge charged: "Before we came into this room, Councilman Brownell gave me his word of honor he would stand by me in this matter."

"I haven't gone back on my word, Joe," said Dr. Brownell, "but I'd rather have the mayor here when we vote on it!"

Three committee reports were

Week-end Storms Bring Season's Rain to Nearly 3 Inches

Week-end storms and rain on Sunday and Monday of this week brought Carmel's total for the season to 2.72 inches, recorded since July 1 at the Carnegie Coastal Laboratory. At this time last year, only .43 inches of rain had fallen. Rain-gauge readings for this month so far, are as follows: Oct. 1, .42; Oct. 7, .04; Oct. 11, .65; Oct. 14, .12; Oct. 15, .30. Crisp October weather and floods of golden sunshine have followed the clearing of the last storm.

Many New Homes Are Planned Here

If building activity has been markedly on the increase during the past few months, it appears to be only the beginning of what may take on the proportions of a real boom, judging from plans in the offing. A flurry of lot transactions at the end of the summer and early this fall points to the possibility of a number of new houses, though some of them will not be built until next summer, when the owners will return to oversee construction. Here are a few of the sales reported out of James Thoburn's real estate office this week:

Judge and Mrs. James Ross, the interesting couple from Manila who spent some time here this summer, bought in Hatton Fields, will build and make their permanent home there, probably next year. Also of Manila are Dr. and Mrs. G. J. Brennan, who acquired a lot on Carmel Point this summer. Judge and Mrs. Walter Duane, old residents of Eighty Acres, have also bought on the Point. Philip R. McGrath and his mother, of Oakland, acquired a lot at Camino Real and Twelfth. Two lots on River Road, the Point, were purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Cluff of Los Angeles, where he is an attorney.

Planning to build soon, Jennie Algar of Modesto purchased a lot near the corner of Casanova and Seventh. Work will start soon, after plans drawn by William Worchester, San Francisco architect, on a house for Diantha Miller of San Jose, on a lot which she bought on the Mesa, overlooking the mission.

Pageant Costumes Are Sought by Committee

About half a dozen costumes that were worn by soldiers or Indians in the Serra pageant were worn home by the actors and have never been returned. Father O'Connell reported this week. These were rented costumes, and must be returned to San Francisco or paid for. Father O'Connell asks that whoever have these costumes return them to him, at the Mission, without further delay, as the costume company is a bit restless for a report on its property.

SAY IT WITH FLOWERS, or better still, bring a flowering plant, or a small shrub, and a bucket of good soil, and help to make a garden to welcome PERRY NEWBERRY back to the Carmel he loves. On the south side of Sixth Avenue, just east of Dolores. DO IT NOW.

Deaf to Hear in New Carmel Theater

In response to the request of nearly a hundred petition signers, according to a letter from W. B. Armstrong, executive of the Golden State Theater Corporation in San Francisco, special amplifying devices for the deaf will be installed in the loge section of the new theater being built on Ocean avenue. They will be an integral part of the theater's sound system, and the very best it is possible to purchase, according to Mr. Armstrong.

OTTO BARDARSON NAMED ON TWO STATE COMMITTEES

Roy Cloud, executive of California State Teachers' Association, has appointed Otto W. Bardarson, superintendent of Sunset school district, on two state-wide committees, one on elementary school problems and the other on relations with affiliated organizations.

Current Events Class at Sunset School Grows to Lecture Series

ARISING from interest evoked by the Monday evening current topics forum at Sunset school, sponsored by the adult education program of the Monterey Union high school district and led by Fred Bechdolt, events moved swiftly this week to expand the project into a lecture series and discussion course which will be of interest to the entire peninsula. As the result of an organization meeting Monday evening, attended by 35 actively interested people, a committee appointed to formulate a definite program and report back next Monday evening, conferred Wednesday with J. R. McKillop, superintendent of the high school district, received his assurance that the plan has his full approval. L. E. Wormley, in charge of the adult education program, will assist with the details of securing speakers.

Allen Griffin, publisher of the Monterey Peninsula Herald, recently returned from several months abroad and in the east, will discuss world conditions in the light of personal observations, as a special feature of the final organization meeting next Monday at 8 o'clock, in the lunchroom at Sunset school.

Before then the committee, including Mrs. Joseph Schoeninger, chairman; Henry F. Dickinson, Melvin C. Dorsett, Wayne Edwards, Mrs. Ross C. Miller and Miss Camilla Daniels, secretary for the forum, with the help of Mr. Bechdolt, will have completed plans now at a tentative stage. If possible the first outside speaker will be secured before the end of the month.

Speakers for the series will be drawn from the University of California Extension Division, which has supplied similar forum groups all over the state, with excellent results. These are full professors and associate professors of the state university, outstanding educators in their respective fields, and dedicating their best efforts to vivid presentation of current topics addressed to adults.

It is planned to present a speaker about once a month. If attendance justifies it, it will be possible for the adult education program to assume expense of the lectures, which is moderate, thanks to the University extension plan. The Monday night discussion group will continue to meet at Sunset school, devoting one session a month to advance study of the topic of the speaker; two following meetings to discussion of the material presented by him. In this way it is believed that a definite and constructive course in current topics can be followed.

Everyone interested in this plan is urged to attend the meeting next Monday evening at the school lunch room, for additional details and an interesting program.

TODDS BUILDING HOME

Mr. and Mrs. John Todd are building a two-story house in a beautiful location on Carmel Point, overlooking the valley from Carmelo road near Sixteenth.

Plan Improvement Costing $250,000

A more attractive entrance to the famous Seventeen-mile drive at the top of Carmel Hill is provided for in the quarter of a million expenditure for improvement of hotel property announced by Carl S. Stanley, manager.

The expenditure over a period of a year or more will include new tap-rooms at Del Monte Lodge and at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, redecorating of ten rooms and cottages at the Lodge and modernizing of the entire old wing of the hotel.

At the same time an intensive advertising campaign of thousands of dollars is being launched in eastern magazines including "Time" and "The New Yorker" which is expected to bring hundreds of tourists to the Monterey peninsula this fall.

The new entrance to the Seventeen-mile drive will be in Old Monterey style with a shaded patio effect. All of the improvements are being carried out under the direction of Robert Stanton, A. I. A.

After spending the summer in Cleveland and at nearby lake resorts, Miss Virginia A. Davis has returned to her Carmel home.

given earlier in the meeting. For the recreation committee, Dr. Brownell, the chairman, submitted the proposal to build two tennis courts in the city-owned sand-dunes, at the foot and to the north of Ocean avenue. Dr. Brownell and Judge George Wood were asked to prepare a resolution in proper form to be presented as a WPA project, under which the city might be required to spend as little as 20 per cent of the total cost. On behalf of the Business Association, E. H. Ewig commended the council, saying his organization, which some time ago came out strongly for additional recreational facilities, thoroughly approved the proposal to construct tennis courts in the dunes.

For the committee studying the widening and opening of Junipero street, Councilman Catlin said no report was ready, pending a session with the county engineer. Catlin also reported for the committee studying signs on city property, favoring an ordinance to regulate signs in the residence district, with a commission to pass on all signs before the council would give permission for their maintenance. Rowntree gave a minority report against any signs in the residence district on city property.

Second and final reading was given the ordinance which will permit the council to change the salaries of city officials on resolution, and it passed. Desire of the council to pay Judge Wood a salary commensurate with his services was responsible for this ordinance. A resolution fixing the judge's salary at $50 was drawn up, but laid over to another special meeting, next Wednesday evening. The ordinance governing the building of balconies and other projections over city property passed final reading. The council re-adopted the resolution of intention to call for bids on an electric franchise, and set Dec. 4 as the date for opening bids. This was at request of P. G. & E., which desires uniform franchises in all territory where it operates.

The council passed a resolution calling for bids on city printing. Rowntree, who among numerous other duties, keeps the books of The Pine Cone, was barred from voting, on advice of the city attorney, on the grounds that he stood to benefit by the granting of the contract.

Among communications to the council were a letter from Mrs. Margaret Grant, protesting "some kind of a buzz-saw operating on a lot near me," which police were asked to investigate; a letter from the Jesselyn brothers, calling attention to use of a portion of their property at the foot of Ocean for parking automobiles, stating a desire to fence these lots. Burge suggested putting boulders at the corner to discourage parking. This brought up a discussion of opening Del Mar street, and a motion asking for an estimate of the cost, which passed. Police Chief Robert Norton recommended street lights for the foot of Ocean and the vicinity of the beach rest houses.

Matter of delinquent business licenses was briefly discussed, and Police Commissioner Catlin promised to get police action against the delinquents. Hall Bragg appeared in person to protest that although he is obliged to pay taxes for the maintenance of a sewer system, he has been denied access to the city sewer. Discussion of the perils of storm waters in his neighborhood, Eighth and Torres, engaged other spectators.

Asked by Catlin, and strongly endorsed by E. H. Ewig, were extra police for Halloween, in the light of considerable malicious mischief on that night last year. Dr. Brownell's suggestion of a supervised Halloween program at the school was countered by the opinion that outsiders are chiefly responsible for damage here. Four deputies will be placed on duty, it was decided.

Judge Wood Marries Couple From Berkeley

With Judge George Wood reading the lines, Miss Helen P. Mills and Henry J. Craviotto of Berkeley were married Sunday morning at the city hall. The wedding party, of about 15 friends and relatives, overflowed Judge Wood's office and the nuptials were staged in style, in the council chamber. After the ceremony, the party separated, the friends heading north again, the bridal couple south. Rice flew in Dolores street before the partying. The couple was attended by Miss Betty G. Pelat of Berkeley and James D. Mallon of Orland.

Mrs. Jack Morris Is School Secretary

Mrs. Jack Morris was appointed office secretary at Sunset school and assistant to the clerk of the board at a short and snappy meeting of the board of education last Thursday evening. Only other important acts of the board, after routine business, were to authorize purchase of gym lockers and purchase of fertilizer and other minor expenditures to condition the school lawn and shrubbery beds.

BETTY JEAN DOWNING BRIDE OF BYRON NEWELL

Carmel friends of Betty Jean Downing and Byron Newell were surprised to learn this week of the couple's marriage last Thursday in Reno. Although Mr. and Mrs. Newell were in town for a few days this week, they told the secret only to a few close friends, and did not wait for congratulations before leaving for a wedding trip. Miss Downing formerly had the Carmel Style Shop, and Mr. Newell recently retired as the proprietor of the meat department of Market Del Mar.

PERRY AND BERNARD MOVE INTO NEW HOME

Perry Newberry and Bernard Rowntree moved Wednesday into their little new cottage on Sixth street, between Dolores and San Carlos. Mr. Newberry celebrated his birthday on the same day.

Saturday morning there will be a golf tournament, with Milton Latham and Glenn Littlefield in charge. Sunday a general meeting will be held at Monterey, from 11 o'clock to 2, preceded by a parade at 10 o'clock. At 2 o'clock a fish dinner will be served and a drum corps exhibition will be held at 4 o'clock. Sunday evening the Monterey post will be host at a big open house.

Arrangements will be completed at another meeting of the joint committee, Tuesday, Oct. 29, in Monterey.

Miss Liesel Wurzmans visited Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Wurzmans over the week-end. She has taken a position in the Oriental art department at Gumps in San Francisco.

Woman's Club Current Events Meeting Oct. 23

Only section meeting of the Woman's club scheduled for the week beginning Oct. 21 is that of current events, which will hold its second meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 23 at 10:30 at Pine Inn. At the first meeting it was decided to change the hour from 10 o'clock to 10:30 for the convenience of members. The section has secured as the new chairman Mrs. Lawrence M. Knox, who is taking the place of Mrs. Willis G. White, chairman for the last three years. On Oct. 23 Mrs. Knox will give a general resume of world events, followed by a general discussion and questions. The club assembly room where all meetings, except the garden section, are held is best approached by the separate entrance on Monte Verde street.

Myra Kinch and Group of Dancers Bring Pleasure to Gallery Crowds

By THELMA B. MILLER

MYRA KINCH, a handsome young woman who looks like Myrna Loy, had the pleasure of jarring three Carmel audiences loose from the most spontaneous expressions of pleasure we have observed for some time. At the Denny-Watrous Gallery last week-end she and her group presented the best dance program of the past year, a personal judgment confirmed by audience response. They were held over for a special performance on Sunday night, made up of the numbers which were most warmly received in the two previous entertainments.

In a program generally excellent and nicely varied it is difficult to designate particular favorites. So many of the better dancers take themselves pretty seriously, and so such moments of pure comedy as Myra Kinch's satire on hard-working, thin-talented singers and dancers in "Revue" were specially appreciated, as were her unusual "Dummy," with cotton-stuffed arms and legs, fish-gaping mouth, expression of blissful idiocy; the jolly "Balletomania" which she danced with her capable partner, Foy Badger.

Those of us who cling with stubborn fondness to the old, pure classic ballet can be coaxed to like the modern abstract forms if fed with judicious doses, such as the bold bright design embodied in the Mousorgsky "Praeludium" the "Allegro Barbaro" and the "Avance." A whole program, with its emphasis on the grotesque, its complete lack of humor and humanity is pretty heavy.

The dances done with masks are so effective, one wonders that dancers do not use this device oftener. The most interesting of all the numbers, to me, was the Aztec "Kochti"—try and pronounce it—definitely racial and ancient. Two masks were used, one facing each shoulder, producing a pleasant dizziness. The posturing of the limbs was bold and striking, the percussion accompaniment most apt. "Polianka" was done in a fat-faced Russian peasant mask, the expression of which seemed to change with the moods of the dancer's body.

Manuel Galea, who accompanied the program at the piano, wrote the musical sequence for "Renaissance," a striking dance-pantomime telling in a half-dozen rich scenes the story of "Thais."

Of the others, which stand out with peculiar vividness in retrospect, instead of blurring in a colorful kaleidoscope, as often is the case with dance programs, one remembers warmly the gay and graceful Beethoven "Polka," the sensuous "Poem Erotique," the colorful closing number, "On the Levee." Miss Kinch carried the major portion of the program herself, in solo numbers, and save that she is a good enough dancer and entertainer to justify such program-building, one might wish she had made more use both of the group and of Foy Badger.

Art Notes

Two galleries at the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in San Francisco will be devoted during the month of October to an exhibition of Fine and Applied Art by students working under the Emergency Education Program. One gallery contains oils, water colors, drawings and prints. The other gallery contains textiles, ceramics and designs for commercial illustration.

An exhibition of water color paintings by Leonard Sheu, San Francisco artist, is being shown at Stanford Art Gallery up to Oct. 22. The group of paintings are vigorous, direct sketches made out of doors, and have a freshness and spontaneity that reflects California landscape in its changing coloring. One portrait by the artist identifies him as well at home in figure work as landscape.

The art gallery is open every day of the week from 10 until 5 o'clock and no admission is charged.

A group of Tempera paintings by the noted artist, Julian Dove, depicting stage scenes of Wagner's "Ring of the Nibelungs," are being exhibited in the Stanford Art Gallery until Oct. 24. These scenes depict the settings of the Wagner performance to be given at the San Francisco Opera House. The paint-

Sunset Students In Art Department Make Posters for Red Cross Drive

THROUGH the art department of Sunset school, directed by Miss Anna Marie Baer, the pupils of the art classes are becoming interested in the November Red Cross Roll Call. Posters for publicity are being prepared by the students and during the campaign will be prominently displayed in show windows in the business district. A committee of competent judges will be designated to select the best works of art that bring out the appeal for the "Greatest Mother on Earth."

Carmel chapter, American Red Cross, will seek $3000 for its 1936 program of relief activities. This is the same sum that was subscribed last year by Carmel citizens. The program calls for a wider range of activities during next year and the officials hope that there will be a greater response from the community.

Mrs. Karl Rendtorff, chairman of the local Red Cross chapter, will attend a special district meeting at San Jose on Oct. 21. At this meeting reports will be made and instructions given to the officials covering the Roll Call that will be inaugurated on Armistice Day.

The president of the United States is president of the Red Cross, and regarding the organization, Mr. Roosevelt says:

"There is no activity in which I am more deeply interested than in the work of the Red Cross. Whenever people suffer, the Red Cross responds to the call with help and comfort. The Red Cross is not sectional, it is not even national, it favors no race and no creed but goes forth in the face of any obstacle with the sole purpose of relieving human distress."

"The work of this great organization has grown and now includes a program of activity designed to prevent accident, illness and misery. This program should be encouraged and expanded for the protection of human life and happiness."

Clara Callender Talks of Golf

By DORIS COOK

TALKING of her many triumphs in the realm of golf, simply and with quiet modesty, Miss Clara Callender of Pebble Beach, recited her early start in that field of endeavor in an interview for The Pine Cone. Because her father was interested in golf and was desirous of teaching his small daughter, Clara, the many intricacies of the sport, Miss Callender began her career with the golf ball at the age of nine. Mr. Callender was a "pro" at an Oakland golf club at that time and Clara entered one or two tournaments during her early training "just for the experience." At 12, Miss Callender won her first big victory, by defeating Mrs. J. E. Mayo and winning the championship of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club. Next, still being at the tender age of 12, she became Del Monte women's champion by defeating Mrs. Brent Potter. At 13 she was runner-up of the Del Monte championship, being vanquished by Jane Douglass. At the "ripe old age" of 14 she won the Del Monte championship the second time. And now at 15 she is still the Del Monte champion, having recently defeated Mary Hayne of Pebble Beach.

Clara is a junior at the Pacific Grove high school and evinces much interest in her school work and activities. Swimming and riding are her next choice of sports—after golf.

Miss Callender believes the most essential quality for a good golfer is a perfectly grooved swing. She also declares that the way to develop champions in golf is to begin instruction at a very early age.

She plans to continue her golf after she graduates from high school and then to continue her education at a business school.

Young Miss Callender is not at all affected by her successes, and impresses one as being all that an American "sportswoman" should be.

Clara Callender Talks of Golf

By DORIS COOK

TALKING of her many triumphs in the realm of golf, simply and with quiet modesty, Miss Clara Callender of Pebble Beach, recited her early start in that field of endeavor in an interview for The Pine Cone. Because her father was interested in golf and was desirous of teaching his small daughter, Clara, the many intricacies of the sport, Miss Callender began her career with the golf ball at the age of nine. Mr. Callender was a "pro" at an Oakland golf club at that time and Clara entered one or two tournaments during her early training "just for the experience." At 12, Miss Callender won her first big victory, by defeating Mrs. J. E. Mayo and winning the championship of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club. Next, still being at the tender age of 12, she became Del Monte women's champion by defeating Mrs. Brent Potter. At 13 she was runner-up of the Del Monte championship, being vanquished by Jane Douglass. At the "ripe old age" of 14 she won the Del Monte championship the second time. And now at 15 she is still the Del Monte champion, having recently defeated Mary Hayne of Pebble Beach.

Clara is a junior at the Pacific Grove high school and evinces much interest in her school work and activities. Swimming and riding are her next choice of sports—after golf.

Miss Callender believes the most essential quality for a good golfer is a perfectly grooved swing. She also declares that the way to develop champions in golf is to begin instruction at a very early age.

She plans to continue her golf after she graduates from high school and then to continue her education at a business school.

Young Miss Callender is not at all affected by her successes, and impresses one as being all that an American "sportswoman" should be.

Dance Should Be In Curricula Is Claim

Old guard educators may consider dancing instruction as one of the frills that schools can do without, but in the opinion of Elizabeth Selden, internationally known student of the dance, dancing should receive the same attention as do graphic arts, music, or dramatics.

In fact, Miss Selden goes further and says that America will never distinguish herself in the dance unless she does incorporate that form of artistic expression in the curricula of her colleges and universities.

Writing in her latest book, "The Dancer's Quest," which has just been published by the University of California Press, Miss Selden explains that dancing as a form of art is largely at a standstill in America because there are too few stable schools of the subject and too few students devoting serious attention to it.

Word has been received that Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wehrhane will arrive here about Nov. 1. They will stop at Pine Inn.

Dr. Paul Hanna, P-T. A. Speaker, Brings Educational Message to Carmel

EFFORTS of the P-T. A. to bring a good speaker and a stimulating experience to friends of Sunset school were well rewarded by the excellent turn-out Tuesday evening, to hear Dr. Paul Hanna, Stanford associate professor of education. With earnest purpose and agreeable delivery, Dr. Hanna posed graphically the tough challenge educators must meet if their work is to be of value and significance; how elementary schools can change their program to meet the demands of a rapidly changing age. The "historic approach," which left pupils with the assumption that "the great poets, the great statesmen, all died about the time we were born," as Dr. Hanna said, is not effective in an age when children's interests are bound up with the fascinating, real, modern world.

"The schools most of us knew sprang directly from the frontier," Dr. Hanna pointed out. "In that simple life, children were an important economic asset, and their major schooling arose from this fact. In their homes, largely self-sustaining, they acquired important aptitudes, character traits and habits of work, while learning simple facts of science, and economic processes by active participation. Until about 150 years ago, no generation was conscious of drastic changes from the generations preceding it. Science and invention have changed all that; in the past 25 years more revolutionary changes have occurred than at any similar period in man's history."

"As we make more and more use of the fine things science is giving us, there is less and less opportunity for children to participate in the processes of life," said Dr. Hanna. "The problem changes for the school, as work habits and character habits are, by the nature of modern family life, not imparted at home. The child's horizon has broadened immeasurably, with today's methods of communication. His world is no longer contained within four walls."

Psychologists have showed the way to new educational approaches, with the discovery that learning is best coordinated with natural processes of maturation and is most effective when the learner is prepared for assimilation by his own interests and purposes.

A change in the philosophy of education has come about with the realization, in the light of modern sciences, "that the universe is not fixed, static, but dynamic, ever-changing." As it is no longer possible to refer to the past as absolute authority, the technique of handling children, either at home or at school, has been revolutionized. They must be flexible-minded, encouraged to accept no facts on a platter, to acquire research techniques, to be open-minded and questioning.

In detail Dr. Hanna described experiments carried on with groups of children engaged in projects arising from their own interests and experience, the painless manner in which they read, wrote, illustrated and figured, without realizing that they were being firmly grounded in the "three Rs" in the process.

Their learning, he said, was more rapid and more lasting than that of comparable groups trained by the traditional "drill" methods, by which they are crammed with unrelated facts long enough to pass examinations, forget as quickly as possible when turned loose for vacation.

While conceding that we must know "origins" in order to understand the present, Dr. Hanna reiterated the conviction of modern educators that it is not safe for schools to place major emphasis on the historic approach in a period of change. "While studying the grandeur that was Greece and Rome, we must not lose sight of the glory that can be America!" he challenged. The richest experience is available to the child today, he intimated, in the process of "investigating and contributing to the dramatic pageant of American culture."

A prologue to the talk was provided by a group of second graders, who sang "Animal Crackers" and

"Sandman." Miss Clara Kellogg, president of the P-T. A., opened the meeting, and Superintendent Otto W. Bardarson presided at the question period. Punch and cookies were served by the hospitality committee in the foyer after the program. This special event was also the regular October meeting of the P-T. A.

Big Road Shows Again Possible

GREAT plans are under way to revive interest in the legitimate theater industry in California, according to E. G. Cooke, who has been connected with that branch of the amusement-field in America, Europe, and Australasia for the past 50 years. Mr. Cooke's visit to Carmel was in the interest of Henry Duffy's production of the outstanding musical comedy hit of the century, "Anything Goes," which Mr. Duffy staged at the El Capitan Theater, Hollywood, eight weeks ago and registered the most brilliant success of his career as a producer.

"Anything Goes" is booked for a fortnight season at the Geary Theater, San Francisco, started last Monday evening. Mr. Duffy is transferring the company of 125 people and the big production that fills three mammoth Southern Pacific baggage cars from Hollywood, to give lovers of musical comedy in this section of the state one of the most enjoyable entertainments extant. "Anything Goes" was originally produced in New York just one year ago. It still continues to attract capacity audiences, and indications are, it will hold to that groove for another year or two. It is enjoying a similar success in London, where Charles B. Cochran staged it under the same conditions as Mr. Duffy produced it in Hollywood.

Will Your Brakes Hold in an Emergency?

In order to protect children (and grown-ups), brakes must be adjusted by an expert. Figure it out— an adjustment of only three one-thousandths of an inch, means a difference of ten feet in bringing your car to a standstill. STANFORD AND CALIFORNIA
ALUMNI DINNER DANCE

Stanford and California alumni and their friends will again celebrate "Big Game Week" with a dinner dance at Rio del Mar Country Club, near Aptos, Wednesday evening, Nov. 20.

Last year a very enjoyable party was attended by several hundred California and Stanford adherents from Santa Cruz, Santa Clara, San Benito and Monterey counties. In fact so successful was the affair it was decided to make it an annual one.

Carmel Literary Capital of State

Carmel is described as "the literary capital of California" in the new book, "California, an Intimate Guide," by Aubrey Drury, just issued by Harpers.

This seems so completely the book on California that it is hard to imagine another general book ever measuring up to it. Everything is there—the historical background, first in a "stream of history" chapter, then specifically throughout the text, as the history and the place seem inextricably interwoven; the biographical element, again made part and parcel of the settings; the spirit and drama and beauty and glamour and bigness of the state; the special quality of this aspect and that; the literary figures that have helped immortalize her; the very human phases, intimate peeks into famous dishes, restaurants, and so on (though specific advice on hotels and restaurants is deliberately omitted as "dating" the book); scientific facts about the birds and flowers, the trees and wonders of nature. It leaves virtually no corner of the state unvisited. A book which those who know and love California and no longer live there will read with nostalgia; a book which puts new meaning into places visited and beginning to fade from sharpness of memory; a book which will make everyone who wants to visit California, start today; a book which prospective travelers would do well to take along as a guide and friend; a book which Californians themselves should have for ready reference on hundreds of facts about their own state that they—above all others—should learn. It is good reading—and a first rate job of scholarship.

Kitten Marooned
In High Pine Tree

Called by Good Samaritan James R. Zuck, Chief Bob Leidig and Billy France took the fire department salvage wagon up to Fourth and Santa Fe the other day, to rescue a kitten which had climbed a great pine tree and was scared spittleless at the idea of descending alone. Zuck recognized the kitten as attached to the Arthur Bartholomew household next door to him. This proved to be an exceptionally intelligent cat, though young. Chief Leidig placed a ladder against a light pole next to the tree and climbed to the height of the branch on which the kitten had taken refuge. Instead of shooting higher, as scared cats so often do in such a predicament, the kitten stepped gratefully to the shoulder of its rescuer and rode down the ladder in that predicament, without undue use of claws, the chief reported.

New Zealand Trip
Is Club Subject

Twenty-six members attended the first program of the Woman's club section Wednesday morning, to hear a most entertaining talk by Mrs. Hurd Comstock, on her summer trip to New Zealand and the south sea isles. A whole tableful of interesting curios added to the vividness of her talk. As a gracious gift to the club, Mrs. Comstock presented to each member a volume of her own poems.

The book section was interested to see for the first time the collection of books purchased for reading and review this year, also on display at this meeting.

The chairman, Mrs. I. N. Ford, presided, and announced the attraction for the next meeting, two reviews by Mrs. H. S. Nye, of "Song in the Wilderness," the new life of Audubon, and "North to the Orient," by Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

Sign Committee on Critical Tour

Members of the committee appointed at the last council meeting to make a study of signs on city property spent Thursday afternoon on an inspection tour of the village. Commercial signs in the residence district came in for study, and householders' signs on city property as well. The matter will require further conferences, but the opinion was expressed that three commercial signs which have come up for discussion in council meetings are maintained in violation of the law. Householders signs, while constituting a technical violation in some cases, were believed not to be constituting a nuisance as in several instances they occupied space where no pedestrians could walk anyway, as no sidewalk or pathway has been laid out, gardens in many instances running to the actual roadway. A fourth commercial sign was found to be projecting too far over the sidewalk, hanging too low, and suspended in a manner the committee believes to be unsafe.

B. W. Adams, Bernard Rowntree, John Catlin and Thelma B. Miller made the inspection tour. Miss Clara Kellogg, also a member of the committee, was unable to attend the meetings.

RETURN FROM VACATION

Miss Bettie Greene and Miss Mollie Gibbons have returned from three weeks' motor trip as far east as Wyoming, where they stayed at a dude ranch, stopping at numerous points of interest on the way home.

FIRST SHOWING FORD V-8 FOR 1936 IS SPECIAL FEATURE OF BERTHOLD MOTOR CO. OPENING

SANTA CRUZ ROAD IMPROVED

Grading and surfacing will soon be under way on the 3.9 miles of road between Scott Valley and a point one mile north of Santa Cruz, reports the National Automobile Club. A fund of $220,000 has been set aside for the project.

IGNITION POINTS

Ignition breaker points should be inspected every 1000 miles to insure maximum motor performance, according to the Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. High compression motors, more cylinders and increased speed call for perfect synchronizing of the ignition system.

PACHECO PEAK ROAD

The new road to Pacheco peak from the Pacheco pass road is completed to the base of the peak. The roadway up the side of the peak, largely rock, is now under way. Work on the lookout tower to top Pacheco peak will start around Oct. 10.

INSPIRATION POINT FILL

The Inspiration Point fill on the Santa Cruz-Los Gatos highway is now complete, following months of work which cost the life of a worker in a cave-in and thousands of dollars. A four-lane surface has been laid.

New Carmel Home Open House to Be Held Tomorrow

CULIMATING many months of preparations and planning, the Carmel building of the Berthold Motor Company, which houses complete Ford showrooms as well as a modern service station, mechanical department, etc., is now open at Seventh and San Carlos streets.

The first peninsula showing of the Ford V-8 for 1936 is a special feature of the opening tomorrow, and everyone is urged to come early for the first glimpse of these sensational new cars.

The service station will feature Gilmore products exclusively and will be in charge of C. H. (Brick) Grimshaw, who has been identified with fine service station operation in Carmel for many years. With Mr. Grimshaw will be Harry Glem, who is also known to Carmelites as a young man anxious and willing to give his best, knowing that by doing so advancement is assured.

The mechanical department will be complete in every detail and will be in charge of factory trained mechanics who know from practical experience the mechanical intricacies of every make of car, and will be able to offer finer repair and supervisory service. Factory-trained Ford experts will also be employed, since the Berthold Motor Company will be the official Ford agency for Carmel. The first and only steam cleaning plant on the peninsula will be another of the many outstanding and progressive accomplishments embodied in the new building.

Cliff L. Jones, known to nearly every Carmelite as a sincere and trustworthy salesman, who is still a "good fellow" in every sense of the word, will be in charge of the sales and display department.

The building itself has been carefully planned and built to conform to the architectural ideals of Carmel and its cost is well in excess of $15,000. It has been constructed on the property owned by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Leidig, on which Berthold has taken a ten-year lease, with the understanding that the lease will be indefinitely extended since Berthold has constructed the building. Mr. Berthold has known the need for a complete Ford service in Carmel for more than two years, or since he took over the business of C. D. Rand & Company in Monterey, and only the lack of a suitable location has retarded the building of such a structure long before.

With the opening of the Carmel building, Mr. Berthold will have an annual payroll of more than $40,000 and a total investment of more than $100,000 in equipment. He recently established a showroom in Pacific Grove to augment his Monterey plant, and now service is available to every automobile owner without the inconvenience of having to drive to another town.

Before coming to the peninsula over two years ago, Berthold had been in business in Palo Alto. He has spent over 25 years in the automobile business.

F. W. Goss, general manager of the Berthold Motor Company assumes partial responsibility for Berthold's ambitious business advances, having affirmed and encouraged Berthold's own ideas as to the great possibilities here for an automotive business which adhered strictly to the Golden Rule.

THE PENINSULA CITIES

Materials Are Important Factors In New Berthold Station

Dealers Locally Furnish Supplies

Materials are the most important factor in the construction of any building, for without good materials the best workmanship is useless.

Local material dealers of reputation have supplied all the materials for construction of Berthold Motor Company's new Carmel plant.

The Tynan Lumber Company furnished the rock, while M. J. Murphy supplied most of the other material.

Roofing was supplied and laid by C. H. Frost, including the tile facing.

J. A. Burge was responsible for the gardening and landscaping work.

TESTING OAK ROOTS

Seventeen hundred trees have been planted in various sections of the state by the University of California division of pomology in an effort to find a rootstock resistant to oak fungus. Forty roots are under test in the hope of checking the damage that has come to orchards in many areas where the fungus is prevalent.

Pacific Grove Museum Thrills

LOOKING through the Pacific Grove museum is the equivalent of making a glass-bottom boat observation of the ocean floor for weeks.

In large glass cases, cleverly mounted, one finds gorgeously colored seaweed, fish that makes one long for a fishing pole, delicate and rare shells, treacherous looking crabs, delightfully tinted coral, delicious looking sea urchins, 20-rayed starfish, clams—and in short everything that makes up the environment of the ocean floor.

Tearing oneself away from this garden of the sea, one becomes immediately fascinated with the largest and smallest eggs in the world. The largest, that of an ostrich, is 1500 times larger than the smallest—that of a humming bird.

A piece of a meteorite that exploded in Arizona engages one's attention next. The stages in making buttons from a shell are observed, then one becomes enamored with the "Fisher Maid," a beautiful piece of work made of Italian marble. Historically lovers should gaze at a plank from the wreck of Napoleon's ship, "The Natalie," in awe. Pelicans and seagulls are observed next and the extensive coin collection is looked at with envy.

Going upstairs one comes upon more shells. Lifelike stuffed animal heads glare at one from the walls, and there are opium pipes, Chinese musical instruments, totem poles, spinning wheels, and more shells.

The mineral exhibit is next and one moves on to the dish display. Italian ware, old china over 1000 years old, English ware, German lusterware, French ware and every kind of dish dear to housewives' hearts is displayed.

One becomes engrossed in the cloth of an Egyptian mummy and then wanders over to the late Mrs. Lucie B. Chase's collection of Indian baskets.

Going downstairs again one returns to the main exhibit—that of sea life—and spends more time gazing at the wonders displayed there. Then with a sigh you sign the guest book and depart, breaking one of the ten commandments, "Thou shalt not covet," by envying the museum its excellent exhibits and wishing you could just have a few of its collections.

"Brick" Grimshaw to Manage New Station

Of interest to Carmel people will be the announcement that C. H. (Brick) Grimshaw has been appointed manager of the Berthold Motor Company's new Carmel establishment in Carmel.

Grimshaw has been well known and liked in various garage and service station enterprises in Carmel for the past few years, and his association with the Berthold organization is said to be a definite forward step for him.

Harry Glem, another well known and liked Carmelite with experience in the automotive business in Carmel will be associated with the Berthold Motor Company in the service station department.

EMERGENCY EDUCATION

Approximately 10,000 young men and women in California are expected to receive direct benefit from the educational program of the new National Youth Administration, for which $50,000,000 has been appropriated at Washington.

DEFAULT OF RELIGION

The greatest default of religion in all times has been that while it generally seeks to cultivate a hatred of sin, it has rarely succeeded in separating hatred of sin from hatred of the sinner.—Tyler Dennett, president, Williams College.

STOP SIGNS AT LOS GATOS

Four new stop signs are being placed in Los Gatos, reports the San Jose office of the National Automobile Club. The markers will be at the corners of Santa Cruz and Bachman; Santa Cruz and Olive; Santa Cruz and Cypress; and East Main and Wilcox. A direction sign will be placed in front of the Hotel Lyndon and two railroad reflector signs will flash on the Wrights road.

Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Stover, who have been staying in the Weber house, moved early this week into their newly completed home in Hatton Fields.

Services Are Held for Mrs. Charles Hunter

Funeral services for Mrs. Charles L. Hunter were held Tuesday morning at the Freeman mortuary, with Rev. Austin B. Chinn officiating. Mrs. Hunter, born Ida Mallers, Jan. 6, 1867 at Troy, N. Y., passed away Sunday evening at the Carmel Valley ranch home of her son, Dr. Paul M. Hunter. A resident of Pasadena for 15 years, she had lived for the last year in Pebble Beach. In addition to Dr. Hunter, the only surviving relative is her sister, Mrs. Edward L. Hunter. Final interment will be in Chicago.

Burton Holmes to Speak Here Oct. 27

"Sooner or later everyone comes to Carmel." This time it is no less a person than Burton Holmes, world-famous traveler, lecturer, of motion picture fame. Burton Holmes will appear in person in the Sunset school auditorium Sunday evening, Oct. 27, in a lecture on Ethiopia and present conditions there, illustrated by motion pictures.

Peter Conley is presenting Burton Holmes on two evenings of next week in the Veteran's auditorium in San Francisco. Last week he appeared in the Pasadena civic auditorium, seating 3000 people, before a sold-out house, with several hundred turned away. So also in Los Angeles.

The only date left in Mr. Holmes four weeks of sold-out appearances on the Pacific coast has been secured to bring him to the Sunset school auditorium in Carmel on Sunday evening, Oct. 27.

Fleming Piano Recital Tomorrow

WILLIAM FLEMING

NEW CURRAN HOME

Excavation began this week for another of the series of Mexican farm houses built by Mrs. Elizabeth Curran. It is on Carmelo Road near Sixteenth.

A PIANO recital of decided interest is that of William Fleming, whom the Denny-Watrous Gallery is presenting tomorrow evening in a program of exceptional merit. The specific numbers are as follows:

Bach, "Toccata in D major"; Brahms, "Sonata in F minor"; Prokofiev, "March" from "The Love of Three Oranges"; Hindemith, "Nachstück"; Danz, "Aesthetics of Machinery"; Toch, "Burlesque"; Chopin, "Polonaise in F sharp minor"; "Waltz in A flat," "Nocturne Op. 27, No. 1," "Scherzo in C sharp minor."

Mr. Fleming is a Californian, and further proof of the now admitted fact that not only the United States but the west is producing great artists whose names need no foreign ending. Young Fleming, however, has had his share of foreign recognition. Six years abroad, a protege of the pianistic giant, Schnabel, whether he played in London, Munich, Prague, Hamburg or elsewhere, he everywhere received a tribute for his sound technique, marked originality and musical maturity. Like his master Schnabel, William Fleming has made a deep study of Beethoven and plays the great sonatas with intellectual grasp and depth. A few quotations from press comments are revealing:

R. Maack, "Hamburger Nachrichten": "These were the triumphs of this broad, intense, and calmly sustained playing . . . Wonderful . . . the silvery detached playing of the separated melodic lines flowing over the shimmering surface of the sustaining pedals which blended and melted together in delicate vibration. . . . And here the pianist came before us . . . as a great artistic hope . . ." Prague: " . . . dazzling tonal delicacy and power." Munich: "An appearance of delightful, spiritual, and pianistic distinction." London: "A sense of style and distinct command of the pianoforte."

Mr. Fleming comes to Carmel from Los Angeles, where he has just played with gratifying success.

First U. S. Coins Were Handmade

Government officials who now make money on a mass production scale looked back through century old records today to the beginning of American coinage 143 years ago.

It was in October, 1792—Treasury history does not fix the exact date—that the first few hundred silver half dimes were released by the Philadelphia mint, a brave symbol of a young nation's efforts to perform for itself the government duties formerly exercised by England.

Now three mints at Philadelphia, Denver and San Francisco are operating at top speed, turning out small change to meet what officials term an unprecedented demand for minor money.

The first half dimes—President Washington said there was a "want of small coins in circulation"—were made entirely by hand.

And although electricity now operates the presses and stamping machines that make the Nation's coins, treasury officials emphasized that speeding up the process has not improved the workmanship.

Three 1935 Championship Race Titles Expected by Gilmore Co.

THAT three 1935 championship race titles will go to drivers using Gilmore products was indicated last week with the word that Jimmie Wilburn, by virtue of his thrilling victory in the last 100-lap race in the Gresham speed bowl, Portland, had won the northwest racing crown.

In honor of his achievement, Wilburn was presented with the Gilmore trophy, symbolic of the northwest championship by Dorothy Hester Hofer, nationally famous woman stunt flier.

Last reports released by the contest board of the American Automobile Association revealed that Kelly Petillo, Huntington Park speedster, is leading the cream of the nation's speed kings for the national championship title by 100 points. Petillo got a big jump on his nearest competitor for this honor when he drove his Gilmore Special to a sensational win in the 500-mile speed classic at Indianapolis last Decoration Day, May 30.

Rex Mays, another Gilmore record breaker, is apparently headed for his second Pacific coast A. A. A. racing title. Mays has been showing the same ability to win consistently that earned him the 1934 Western race crown, and, according to the last reports he is officially way out in front for the 1935 honors.

Along with Petillo, Mays is considered by experts as one of the most skillful drivers in the world.

Through practical economy, speed and endurance tests, the famous Gilmore Red Lion gasoline and Lion Head motor oil have checked up a total of 243 records. It is from this consistent performance of breaking records that Gilmore derived the name Record Breaker for their increasingly popular products. The complete line of these products, developed to produce record breaking performance in the average car are now sold at the new Berthold station.

Doctrine of Atonement Scientist Topic Sunday

"Doctrine of Atonement" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, Oct. 20, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The Golden Text will be: "We are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God" (II Cor. 5:20). Other Bible citations will include: "Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them. And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God" (Luke 4:40-41).

The Lesson-Sermon will also include the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus taught the way of Life by demonstration, that we may understand how this divine Principle heals the sick, casts out error, and triumphs over death . . . By his obedience to God, he demonstrated more spiritually than all others the Principle of being" (p. 25).

MALLON AND THE "REDS"

This week we are digging ourselves out from under a snowstorm of clippings of Paul Mallon's syndicated story on Carmel. To those who still have it in mind to send us the piece—thanks, don't bother, we've already seen it—several times. The article has a Carmel date-line, which is intended to indicate that he wrote it here, presumably after exhaustive research. None of the dozen or so Carmelites who would be the natural objectives of a visiting newspaper correspondent will admit to having seen hide nor hair of Mr. Mallon, so it seems probable that he wrote his Carmel article in a San Francisco hotel, from memory of the occasional freakish newspaper yarns that find their way to metropolitan newspapers from here.

He calls Carmel "the sub-rosa capital of communism," and says: "An understanding of communist purposes can be obtained if you can get in to see 'the old fox' here . . . clever and brilliant writer . . . etc., etc. This is a good joke on Mr. Mallon, because if he means Lincoln Steffens he could have "got in" by the simple expedient of knocking on the Steffens front door. Considering Mr. Steffens' frail health, he is exceptionally gracious in granting interviews to any and all time-wasters, including newspaper men with preconceived ideas. Whether he would go in for an explanation of "communist purposes" is another matter.

Mr. Mallon does not appear to understand California very well, which perhaps explains his slightly fantastic estimate of Carmel. California is one of the strongest Republican states in the union, because of the number of wealthy easterners who make this their playground, the retired people living on fixed incomes, large enough for comfort but not for ostentation; exceptional wealth in agriculture and raw materials leading to a strong class of industrialists and white collar farmers. This is the conservative bulwark; all these classes are naturally interested in preserving the status quo, as are the business men, large and small, who traditionally string along with the industrialists.

Then we have the substrata of depression-derelects, who are distinctly out of patience with the status quo, who have poured into the state because at least they don't freeze to death here. These two elements clashed in an exceptionally bitter gubernatorial campaign a year ago.

Having no resident laboring class, and being off the main highway, out of the path of the restless migration of the homeless, Carmel would rate, accurately, as a community conservative to reactionary. It has probably fewer communists per capita than most California towns. Those living here are intelligent and articulate; their hands are uncalledoused, their radicalism is theoretical rather than personal. Due to the backwash of state politics, wherein the adjective "red" is applied to everything not safely Republican, Carmel had its red scare a year ago, and its fascist scare as well.

A preponderate liberal element, strong enough to hold both sides within limits of reason—and of course despised by both extremes—has sat and is sitting on the lid. The liberals have no program, no slogans, no catch-words, but their quiet disapproval of red-baiting and their unexcited distrust of "communist purposes" may have averted tragedy in times past, when feelings ran away with good sense.

All this does not sound very sensational, and undoubtedly would have been too dry for Mr. Mallon's column. Many writers do not examine facts too closely, because it is hard to make facts sound interesting—blood and thunder is much easier.

MISSION CARMELO

*More than a century of days in bright precessional
 Have knelt upon the walls of Carmel Mission,
 An earth-claimed altar of a high tradition.
 To the measured music of the spheres, a long recessional,
 Trail the blowing vestments of the nights,
 Bearing aloft the stars, their vesper-lights.
 The choir of birds is momentary as their song;
 The trees alone remember, staunch and strong.
 No rustling ghost of padre wanders there;
 It is the breeze invokes the evening prayer.
 And where the wood cross stands in crumbling sod,
 Only the poppies lift communion cups to God.*

—WILFORD KIECHLI.

AUTUMN SORCERY

To H. M.

*Why does your beauty haunt me so tonight?
 We said farewell so many years ago;
 We laughed and chatted gaily, and were quite Content that our brief friendship ended so.*

*You left no token with me; a last smile,
 A word, a touch, the old familiar theme,
 Were all—and all in the long afterwhile
 Of life were lost, the driftwood of a dream.*

*Tonight the wistful lamp-light in my room,
 Or some dark sorcery of wind and rain,
 Has conjured up your beauty from the gloom,
 With all that far June twilight in its train.*

—OTTO FREUND.

Here's Looking at You

By LOIS COLLINS PALMER

A YEAR or so ago a friend out from New York was telling me about the frosted foods which had inestimably lightened her housekeeping chores in her Manhattan apartment. She is a professional woman, getting her own dinners as so many of them do, and with neither the time nor the inclination for extensive marketing and long cooking operations. I had never heard of frosted foods and doubted if they were to be had on the Pacific coast. Then a day or two after she had been dilating on the deliciousness of quick-cooking, prime frozen vegetables and fully ripened fruits with all the flavor frozen in, we walked into a Carmel grocery store and saw them displayed.

Housewives are conservative, and without this word of recommendation from the metropolis I probably never would have tried them. Since then I have so often been helped out of a tight place, at the end of a long and tiring day, that I feel other Carmel women should be told about them. Particularly at this time of the year, when fresh vegetables are higher, the frozen ones compare more than favorably in price. They are slightly expensive in the summer season, but the difference is more than made up in quality and ease of handling.

Here is the trick, for busy women who work until six, or those who leave a bridge game guiltily late, and want something particularly good and quick-cooking for dinner. A few minutes before the stores close you can pick up your package of frozen peas or tiny green beans, or baby limas, or spinach or broccoli. Five or ten minutes in boiling water and you have a dish of fresh—not canned—vegetables. For the freezing process retains something that is lost in canning. As a matter of fact, unless you raise vegetables in your own garden, no fresh vegetables are quite as good as the frozen ones. There are frozen meats, too, and fish—eastern ones of the type we do not find fresh, eastern cod, red perch, as good as mountain trout. The frozen strawberries and sliced peaches are recommended for making ice-creams—I don't know, they are so good just slightly melted and served with cream I've never got around to experimenting more elaborately. Try some of these things without telling the family; they'll wonder where on earth you got such good food, and will credit you with unsuspected perspicacity in marketing. They needn't know that you were able to cut others, save a lot of time trotting around looking for the very best, and over the stove as well.

PEACE OR PROSPERITY?

We are mildly astonished at our own perspicacity in pointing out, last March 15, that there was about to be a war of conquest in northern Africa. A few other national publications were interested in the situation; the daily press had not yet taken up Ethiopia and Italy. We were twitted by a local editor for going so far afield for editorial material. In the light of the present situation, it was a good bit of historical forecasting.

The stand taken by the United States and the League of Nations would be more comforting were it not for that nagging question, why was not a similar course taken in the case of Japan and Manchuria? We know the obvious, cynical answers, and any pride we might take in the actual functioning of a world-wide machinery against war of aggression in this enlightened age, is dissipated in the light of those answers.

The effectiveness of the "sanctions" against Italy will depend on just how hard the economic shoe pinches, and whom. After half a decade of world-wide depression it will require a high order of idealism for the industrialists of this country and the righteous League of Nations to refrain absolutely from giving aid to the aggressor. Clamping down on the munitions makers is futile; the real sinews of war are other products, a brisk trade in which would do much to revive our fainting economy. Already our big business men have begun to murmur, via small and obscurely headed stories in the daily press. In some quarters it has been repeatedly stated that what the world needs is a "real good war" to burn up surpluses in men and materials. Those of us who do not believe that this is the constructive way of solving economic problems will have a hard row to hoe in opposing this sentiment.

Some genius once figured out that the last great war might never have been fought if it had not been for modern methods of communication. Diplomats could have ironed out the difficulties and smoothed troubled waters, save for the speed with which cables and telegrams traveled round the world, found their way into the press and incited national animosities beyond all power of curbing them. To the perils of 1914 have now been added a new one; the radio, by which the actual voice of belligerent leaders takes to the air-waves, appealing to sympathy or arousing resentment. If we get out of this jam without another and more horrible world war, it will be because all humanity has gone through a miraculously swift evolutionary process in 20 years.

PEACE MEETING

Plans have been considered here this week for a peace meeting to be held early next month. This is an enterprise which should recommend itself to all intelligent people in Carmel. It is more than a futile idealistic gesture. Democratic governments are sensitive to public reaction; a determined sentiment for peace, as expressed by nation-wide mass meetings will have weight in the balance if any international situation should arise leading Congress to consider seriously a declaration of war. The head of any nation firmly set against war will work twice as hard to seek amicable settlement of "incidents" as will the head of an apathetic or jingoistic people.

It is hoped that from this initial meeting and the interest centering about the Monday evening current events class at the school a constructive program of adult education will be launched for Carmel. In troubled times a democratic people must be well versed in current affairs.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

M. and Mrs. Hugh Nelson, Ann Lawrence, C. C. Spruce, Lawrence Nelson and Ann Nelson, a writing clan, have taken one of the old Professors' Row cottages on Camino Real and plan to devote a winter in Carmel to some plain and fancy writing. This literary firm, operating under numerous nommes de plume, are two personable young people; she is Ann, he is either Lawrence or Hugh, I don't remember which, and their last name is really Nelson. They lived in Carmel about five years ago, when they were fresh out of college—very, very fresh, they are inclined to think now—and hoping to fire the world with their idealistic devotion to Literature. It wasn't as easy as they hoped. They have done a good bit of vagabonding; have been down to their last dime, yes, and below that; and when they sold their first book, several years ago, he was working as a chef in a restaurant and she was a waitress.

They have lived in Greenwich Village, and have been showed in in a Colorado mountain cabin, since leaving here. They have seen the auto camps and the cheap restaurants of a good many of the towns between here and the east coast. They have taken their post-graduate course, and have acquired the discipline of steady work which may mean that in a few years time they can return to the purely literary ideas which now repose in packing boxes under a storm of rejection slips.

Being determined to write and to live by writing, they began an intensive and exhaustive examination of the market, when getting down to the last dime became an experience too frequent to be interesting, and "artistic" manuscripts returned with monotonous regularity. They discovered a literature and an audience they had not known existed, and would have turned up their well-bred, collegiate noses if they had known of it. Mystery stories, spicy novels, light romances—the books and stories literary poseurs think "anyone can write"—until they try it. They have a shelfful of books now; signed "Ann Lawrence," and representing an interesting system of collaboration, while as Lawrence Nelson he has had two romances published; he writes detective adventure stories—with Ann's help in the necessary research—as C. C. Spruce. She supplied the material on Carmel in the book "Garrets and Pretenders," a study of Bohemia which came out several years ago. Other literary chores too numerous to mention have occupied this busy pair since they left Carmel and learned to develop a career in an orderly, methodical fashion.

"I don't believe in writing down to any public," says the male half of the literary family. "We may joke about our books, and we may not take ourselves seriously, but we're serious enough when we're at work on a book. We do the best job we know how on each one we write." (They're under contract for four a year). "There are progressive stages in writing, as in everything else. Pretty soon we may be 'promoted' to the next stage."

The writing Nelsons are still young; they have learned a vast deal since they emerged from college, not quite dry behind the ears. Having mastered the knack of faithful, conscientious, regular work, their shelf of books may yet expand to include one of the Great American Novels!

THROUGH Miss Laura Dierssen, her close friend, the other Carmel friends of Florence Locke are able to keep in touch with her interesting and brilliant experiences abroad, where, since early summer she has been carrying on her work as "creative interpreter in the field of poetry," as she has been described by William Rose Benet, whose "John Brown's Body" is one of her major and most popular readings during her current season in England. Miss Locke is best remembered in her native California for her Ellen Terry lectures and recitals of Shakespeare heroines.

During the summer, Miss Locke read "The Bronze Horses" at a big club, the Lansdown, which is made out of what was Lansdown House in Berkeley Square, and has preserved the exquisite old ballroom, perfect Empire, gold, green and crystal. Due to the interest of Miss Anabel Douglas, an American who has lived 40 years in London, and the last 15 years in Whistler's house there, Miss Locke had the pleasure of presenting "Sea Blue and Blood Red" there, at a party of over 100 guests, including the great grandson of Nelson and Lady Hamilton. Miss Douglas, who is described as "a sort of elderly, white-haired Mrs. Fiske, slim, quick, clever as a lizard and one of the great hostesses of London," discovered Miss Locke during her "John Brown" recitals at Grosvenor Hall earlier in the season. Projected was a long series of weekly recitals in historic Whistler house for the autumn, as well as a tour to Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Florence and Paris, and programs at the Liverpool Little Theater, at Nugent Monk's, in Norwich, and at Edith Craig's house in Kent.

Two new programs are to be added

Carmel Bonded Debt Surveyed

Taxpayers of Carmel owed a bonded debt at June 30, 1934 of $12,500, or $4.40 per capita of the population, according to a study of the bonded indebtedness of the city governments of California, recently published by California Taxpayers' Association. The city ranked 233rd from the highest of all California cities in bonded indebtedness per capita, the association found. Payments by the city government on its bonded indebtedness during the fiscal year 1933-34 amounted to $765 for interest and $2000 for redemption.

The ten cities having the highest per capita bonded debt were Vernon, Newport Beach, Pasadena, Beverly Hills, Long Beach, Stockton, Avalon, Los Angeles, San Clemente and Rialto.

C. J. Ryland stopped at El Encanto hotel during a recent stay at Santa Barbara.

Seven tables were formed for bridge Monday afternoon, in the assembly room at Pine Inn, the first meeting this season of the Woman's club bridge section. Mrs. John Jordan is section chairman. Tea was served at the close of the afternoon.

PHOTOGRAPHIC prints of the eight prize-winning paintings in the 1935 Carnegie Institute International Exhibition of Modern Paintings which opened in Pittsburgh yesterday will be for a short time on display in The Pine Cone office.

Hipolito Hidalgo de Caviedes, the Spanish artist who was awarded first prize, was born in Madrid in 1902. He studied with his father, who is a well known sculptor, traveled for two years in Italy and Germany, had a one-man exhibition in the Salon of the Friends of Art in Madrid in 1929. He exhibited first in this country with a group of Spanish artists in New York in 1927, and in 1930 he exhibited in the National Exhibition of Fine Arts in Madrid. In 1929 he was awarded a silver medal at the Seville Exposition for his mural decorations. He first exhibited at the Carnegie International in 1931.

The painting which won first prize, "Elvira and Tiberio," is decorative, sensitive, novel in its color scheme, and modern in conception. It shows a young South American negro couple, all dressed up with apparently no place to go. They are seated on an Empire sofa, and are posed stiffly as in an old daguerrotype. The artist is very personal in the treatment of his subject, refreshing, original, and a master of drawing. The canvas was painted this summer, and the artist had to rush it to America without having had an opportunity to varnish it.

Charles E. Burchfield, the American artist who won second prize, was born in Ashtabula Harbor in 1893. He studied at the Cleveland School of Art from 1912 to 1916 and is represented in a number of important museums in the United States. He has exhibited in Carnegie Internationals since 1927, and served on the American committee of selection for the 1930 International.

The picture, "The Shed in the Swamp," with which he won the second prize is, as practically all his work, in water color. Yet, because of the way he handles his medium and because of the size of his pictures, the beholder always thinks of them as oil paintings. While still a young man, he is a pioneer in the now ever-increasing school of artists who paint the American scene. He is an artist of force and originality. His work is rich in quality, and he has an especially fine feeling for light and space. The Carnegie award is the most important one he has received so far in his career.

Henry E. Mattson of Woodstock, New York, who won the third prize for a marine, "Deep Water," was born in Sweden in 1887, but came to this country when very young. While working as a mechanic in Worcester, Massachusetts, he took up the study of painting. He attended for a time the school of the Worcester Art Museum. In 1916 he went to Woodstock to study landscape painting under John Carlsen, and from that time he has been a prominent member of the famous Woodstock Colony. He first exhibited in a Carnegie International in 1927. Mattson's paintings, as demonstrated so clearly in his prize-winning canvas, are highly individual and profoundly simple.

Albert Saverys, who was awarded first honorable mention for a still life, lives in Deynze, Belgium. He first exhibited in this country at the 1925 International, and in the 1928 International he received an honorable mention for his painting, "Winter in Flanders." He specializes in landscape and still life. His paintings are vigorous, and his color unusual.

Candido Portinari, who received second honorable mention, was born in 1903 at São Paulo, Brazil. He has been painting since he was eight years old and is recognized as an outstanding figure in the Brazilian modern art world. He has recently been appointed professor of art at the University of Rio de Janeiro. This is the first time he has exhibited in the United States. His entry is called "Coffee," a bold, rhythmic composition of plantation workers.

Per Deberitz, who was awarded third honorable mention, was born in 1880 at Droeback, Norway. He was a pupil of Henri-Matisse for a time. His productions are chiefly landscape, painted with a trend toward the modern. He is exhibiting in the Carnegie International for the first time this year. His painting is "Sun and Sea."

Sergius Pauser, the Austrian artist who was awarded fourth honorable mention, for his "Austrian Landscape" was born in Vienna in 1896. He first exhibited in the United States in the 1931 International.

Maurice de Vlaminck, who won the prize for the best painting of a garden or flowers, offered by the Garden Club of Allegheny county, with his arrangement of flowers and vase, is a distinguished name among modern French artists. He is a painter, water-colorist, lithographer, illustrator, and writer. He was born in Paris in 1876. As a boy he lived in the town of Chactou, where Andre Derain was his neighbor.

skirmish at Gilroy on Oct. 26; a "knock-down-and-drag-out" at Pacific Grove Nov. 9 with King City as the opponents; and the season will close with the annual "big game" with Monterey, played this year in Pacific Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Mack Honored on Fortieth Wedding Anniversary

MORE than 45 years ago a young man of the name of Silas W. Mack completed his schooling at the McGill University in Canada, where he had lived since boyhood. He then taught school in Canada for two years and in 1892 he journeyed to Salinas and there made his home. This young gentleman met at this time a young lady, Daisy Winham, and after he had been admitted to the bar in 1894, he broached the subject of marriage to her. She responded favorably and they were subsequently joined in matrimony, Oct. 16, 1895; and have just finished celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary, this Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack have lived on the peninsula for 33 years and are much loved and highly regarded by all who have come in contact with them. Mr. Mack has been superintendent of the Mayflower Congregational Church for 30 years and has been for 33 years the teacher of the largest Sunday school class of high school girls on the peninsula. He is a director of the Bank of Carmel, the First National Bank of Monterey, and the First National Bank of Pacific Grove; and the vice-president of the First National Bank in Monterey. He has been United States commissioner since 1912. To be spoken of with the rest of the Mack's accomplishments are their five children: Rev. Silas Franklin Mack, Wilfred T. Mack, Dr. Henry W. Mack, Arthur T. Mack and Dorothy Elizabeth Mack.

In celebration of this 40th anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Mack entertained at a dinner on Wednesday. Those present to congratulate them on their unusually happy married life were: Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Clark of Salinas, cousins of Mrs. Mack; Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Daugherty, Mrs. Emma Winham, sister-in-law of Mrs. Mack; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Winham, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Mack; all of Salinas. Rev. and Mrs. John H. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Mack, son and daughter-in-law of the Macks; and D. W. Mack, brother of Mr. Mack.

In the evening of Wednesday the members of the Congregational Church held a surprise party at the Mack home and presented Mr. and Mrs. Mack with a lovely gift in token of their appreciation for the many things these two have done for the church and for the privilege of their friendship.

Those attending were: Mrs. James MacKarcher, Mrs. Mary A. Ellis, Mrs. Amelia M. Shepherd, Mrs. Nellie Baumgartel, Mrs. Ralph Hovland, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. McQuill-

Lobos Included In Park Survey

THE State Chamber of Commerce is now making a study of the 70 state parks and historical monuments, of which Point Lobos is one, with the view that eventually they will be developed to the fullest extent. The State Division of Parks now has properties worth more than $14,000,000. They comprise a system of parks that reaches from the northernmost to the southernmost end of the state.

Although the state park commission has been able to operate the majority of these magnificent properties in a satisfactory manner, it was felt that the advice of the State Chamber would be invaluable in relation to future development. When the State Chamber of Commerce has completed its research work, its plans will be submitted to the State Park Commission. Over 5,000,000 persons have visited these state parks during the present season from Jan. 1 to Sept. 15, 1935, and have found that facilities have been much improved.

These state parks are in no way competitive with private enterprises, but will furnish for all times places of amusement and recreation at a nominal cost. Plans are nearly perfected whereby additional improvements will be inaugurated during the next few months by means of federal government funds. These monies will be used in building fire trails, roads and park structures.

NEW VOLUME OF POEMS BY ROBINSON JEFFERS OF MAJOR IMPORTANCE

By THELMA B. MILLER

A NEW volume of poems by Robinson Jeffers is an event of major importance. If the Jeffers audience is small, it is also worldwide. For any poet and dark prophet to rise to such eminence as Jeffers has attained in a distinctly materialistic age is something of a phenomenon. Discussion of his writings is generally in an atmosphere of controversy. Whether you like them or whether you deplore them, you can scarcely ignore him.

The new volume, "Solstice and Other Poems" is beautifully printed by the Grabhorn Press of San Francisco and published by Random House. "Solstice" is not the book's opening poem, that position is given to the heroic "At the Birth of An Age";—derived from the closing chapters of the Nibelung Saga, the action of which refers itself to a date fairly correspondent with the end of the Graeco-Roman age and the beginning of this one," the author explains in a short foreword. That bit of prose at the beginning of the book offers not the least of the pleasure to be derived from this new work. Jeffers' rare prose is peculiarly beautiful; measured, studied, cadenced. One would wish for more of it, but for the inevitable concession that the somber, majestic power of his thought can only be fittingly expressed in the form of heroic poetry. But listen to his penetrating comment on the Christian age:—

"Its civilization is the greatest, but also the most bewildered and self-contradictory, the least integrated, in some phases the most ignoble, that has ever existed. All these qualities, together with the characteristic restlessness of the age, its energy, its extremes of hope and fear, its passion for discovery, I think are bred from the tension between its two poles, of western blood and superimposed Oriental religion. This is the tension that drew taut the frail arches of Gothic cathedrals, as now it spins the frail cosmogonies of recent science and the brittle utopias of economic theory... I believe that we live about the summit of the wave of this age, and hence can see it more objectively, looking downward toward the troughs on both sides, than our ancestors could or our more remote descendants will."

And so he tells the story of Gudrun, widow of Siegfried, wife of Attila the Hun, and the painful contradictions of her nature, leading her to desire the death of her brothers who murdered Siegfried, yet instantly to deplore the rash speech in which she denounced them to her savage lord;—Attila, whom she loathed for his uncouthness, yet whom her nature needed as an instrument of power.

This poem has an intoxicating dark beauty and power, and offers less to disturb the squeamish than have some of the poet's previous works. He has a great gift of laying one good English word against another, and making music thereby.

There is an unusual bit of humor in this poem—it is loosely in the form of a play, with dialogue and scenic directions—in the character of "The Sweeper," a sort of heavenly scene shifter, who speaks in doggerel—albeit Jeffersian doggerel. Reminiscent of Ogden Nash is a passage when the Sweeper has trouble remembering his rhymes, struggles and puts forth this:

"Someday cabbages and vineyards,
Will spring out of the warriors' inwards."

In "Solstice" Jeffers turns from classic times to the present and to one of his favorite locales, the Sur coast and the Monterey peninsula. Some sensitive souls have long been aware of the aura of tragic doom residing in this region, a conviction which Jeffers has made articulate. "Solstice" is a ghastly tragedy, but save for its vivid and poetic form, not more distressing than many an incident which has found its way from this region into the bald prose of the daily press. In fact, it may prescribe an actual happening, I do not know. The setting is presented with that sensitive faithfulness—as well as geographic accuracy—which has distinguished Jeffers' other narrative poems of this coast.

In the dozen or so shorter poems which complete the volume may be read Jeffers' philosophy and his comment on this age. He looks upon the world understandingly, but with a gesture of rejection. His comment on rearmament:

"I would burn my hand in a slow fire
To change the future... I should do foolishly.
The beauty of modern Man is not in the persons but in the Disastrous rhythm, the heavy and mobile masses, the dance of the Dream-led masses down the dark mountain."
On cities:
"... You have seen through the trick to the beauty;
If we all saw through it, the trick would hardly entice us and the earth
Be the poorer by many beautiful agonies."

Reflecting on dictatorship and his personal quarrel with the dependence on gadgets and comfort, which he sees as the enemy of our racial fiber: ("Ave Caesar")

"No bitterness: our ancestors did it
They were only ignorant and did it
They were only ignorant and hopeful, they wanted freedom
but wealth too.
Their children will learn to hope for a Caesar.
Or rather—for we are not aquiline
Romans but soft mixed colonists—"

Some kindly Sicilian tyrant who'll keep Poverty and Carthage off until the Romans arrive.
We are easy to manage, a gregarious people,
Full of sentiment, clever at mechanics, and we love our luxuries."
Again, in "The Trap"
"... We must adjust our economics to the new abundance..."
Of what? Toys: motors, music boxes,
Paper, fine clothes, leisure, diversion.

I honestly believe (But really an alien here: trust me not)
Blind war, compared to this kind of life,
Has nobility, famine has dignity..."

Evert Sholund Takes Over Defense In "Trial of Mary Dugan" Next Week

EVERT SHOLUND, whose dramatic progress has been watched with interest during the past year, particularly during his summer work with the Pinon Players, has a fine part in "The Trial of Mary Dugan" to be given by the Carmel Community Players next Friday and Saturday night, Oct. 25 and 26. He tangles bitterly with Byington Ford, the hard-boiled district attorney, in conducting the dramatic trial of Mary (Sibyl Leonard) who is charged with the murder of her lover. By an odd circumstance, the defense attorneys are changed in the middle of the trial, and Ed West (Sholund) is replaced by Jimmy Dugan (George McMenamin). If the verbal clashes of Ford and Sholund were astringent, those between Ford and McMenamin are fit to draw blood.

Sibyl Leonard sits helplessly by, while intimate details of Mary Dugan's life are presented with the startling frankness of courtroom terminology. Her scenes are at an intensely dramatic, almost hysterical pitch throughout, and in presenting the emotional, over-wrought accused actress, Sibyl Leonard is developing in rehearsal a character of remarkable color and variety. An intense scene in which she blazingly defends herself and justifies her conduct to By Ford will undoubtedly go down in history as one of the finest bits of acting, by both, ever seen on the Carmel stage.

Harriet Smith, the directress, has developed a unique technique for encouraging her amateur troupe to "project themselves." While rehearsals go on in one end of the old greenroom, technical work proceeds in the other. Striving to make themselves heard over the pounding of hammers, howls of "What — did you do with that paintbrush!" sections of scenery falling over with a crash, the most timid of thespians develop a fine, robust performance.

An unusually good advance sale for both nights is reported by Lloyd Weer, the business manager. Due to the large number of people in the cast or otherwise engaged in the production, a wide interest is developing locally and in nearby communities, and capacity audiences are expected for the two performances.

Musical Romance at Filmarte Now

Jessie Matthews in "Evergreen," will be seen at the Filmarte Theatre for two days, beginning today. This spectacular musical romance is an adaptation of the stage play by Benn W. Levy which enjoyed several seasons' run at London's Adelphi Theatre, and is rated as a sort of blue-ribbon winner of the Gaumont British studios. Gaumont British, awaiting the arrival of a medium with which to make a ten-strike for Miss Matthews, settled on "Evergreen," the stage hit, as her introductory starring vehicle for American fans.

"The Man Who Knew Too Much," featuring Nova Pilbeam, Peter Lorre, Leslie Banks and Edna Best, is the GB melodrama thriller showing Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, at the Filmarte Theater.

Its swift-moving plot starts in the Alps, at St. Moritz, with the murder of a British secret service agent. Before he does he asks Bob Lawrence to take a message to the British consul. This puts not only Lawrence, but his young daughter and his wife on the spot with the terrorists who are plotting the assassination of a foreign diplomat.

The daughter is kidnapped and threatened with death if Lawrence passes on his information. Lawrence picks up the trail and, after a pitched battle in an alleged temple of sun worshippers, he is taken prisoner by Abbott, the terrorist leader.
